

Jonas Landman obtained his PhD in 2021 from the University of Paris, during which he developed new quantum algorithms for machine learning. He is now a researcher at QC Ware and PostDoc at the University of Edinburgh, working on provable quantum advantage for near term applications in machine learning.